1. GENERAL INFORMATION:

Developmental Education (DE) is a deliberate and vital element in preparing officers for future leadership roles in the Air National Guard. Adjutants General and Wing Commanders play pivotal roles in the nomination process. Nominees should be officers who clearly demonstrate the potential to serve in key positions within the Air National Guard.

Selection to an IDE/SDE/ASG school or fellowship assignment is an extremely competitive process. All application packages are evaluated by an Officer Developmental Education Panel. The panel carefully considers an applicant's demonstrated grasp of the Air Force Institutional Competencies, the strength of leadership's endorsement, the applicant's experiences, and the capacity of the member to serve in leadership positions at wing, state, and national levels.

IDE/SDE/ASG selections are resident opportunities at Air Force and sister service schools, as well as fellowships at educational, government, and business institutions. Attendance is a PCS assignment with programs beginning between May-August 2018. Completion of most of the listed IDE or SDE schools and fellowships satisfy Air Force PME requirements for promotion. Some schools do not award resident DE credit and will require the completion of the appropriate level of DE through distance learning. Not all schools award Joint PME educational credit and/or award a master's degree. The table provided within this announcement gives a brief synopsis of each course and should be reviewed by all applicants and their senior leadership to consider the appropriate course for the applicant to attend.

IMPORTANT NOTES:

This announcement is intended for use by field applicants. NGB/HRT will provide instructions separately for statutory tour members whom the ANGRC Force Development Council determines eligible for DE opportunities. Statutory tour members that the ANGRC Force Development Council did not identify as eligible to apply for DE opportunities may apply as a member of their affiliated state. If selected in this manner, the statutory tour member will be required to resign from the statutory tour program to attend.

IDE/SDE/ASG selection is a tremendous honor, opportunity, and investment for the Air National Guard and our members. The Director, ANG is the final approval authority for selection and placement. Selection takes precedence over voluntary deployments or other potentially conflicting activities. Only members that present significant humanitarian or mission-impacting concerns outside their control will be considered for a non-prejudicial deferral or declination. The condition must not have existed at the time of application and swaps will not be considered.

NOTE: AGR members attending IDE/SDE/ASG programs will remain in their AGR billet; no additional resources will be provided to accommodate their backfill.

Attending members remain limited to regular 60-day accrued leave requirement; inability to use leave while attending school/fellowship does not remove this Air Force requirement.

2. APPLICATION DEADLINE: All application packages must be received by NGB/HRT no later than 13 September 2017. (Please follow instructions for the submission process on this announcement).
Applications received after this date will not be considered.
